1. In order to improve their aid to the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV), the Indochina People's Liberation Committee has established offices in Canton, Nanning, and Kunming. The 2 Field Army has sent YANG Wen-ch'ing (楊文清) to be its liaison officer in Kunming.¹
2. On 12 May Nguyen Dai Chi (阮大志), a DRV representative in China, returned to Canton from Peiping. In Canton, he discussed the allocation of arms and ammunition to DRV. In accordance with Nguyen Dai Chi's suggestion, Weichou (109-21-) Island will be established as a base for transporting military supplies to Vietnam.
3. The Kwangtung, Kwangsi, and Yunnan Military District Commands have received instructions from Peiping to select ten advisers, all Communist Party members, who will be assembled at Nanning at the end of May for movement to Vietnam.
4. In early May supplies including 60 mm and field artillery guns, mortars, bazookas, machine-guns, rifles, grenades, ammunition, explosives, automobile spare parts, gasoline, and medicines, were sent from Tunghsing (107-58, 21-33) and Nanning to Vietnam.
5. On 25 April LIU Sui-ch'uan (劉瑞春), head of the Sino-DRV Liaison Station at Nanning, went to Vietnam.
6. On 28 April the Central and South China Military Area Command began shipping 1,500 boxes of arms and military equipment from Hankow via Hengyang to Vietnam.

1. [REDACTED] YANG Wen-ching has opened a running office of the Indochina People's Liberation Committee.
